CHRISTMAS SPIRIT IS ABROAD; PEOPLE THINK OF OTHERS

Italian Welfare Organization
Clothes 113 Children,
38 Adults

FOOD IS DISTRIBUTED

Parties Given for Tots; Many Bodies Assist With Work

The spirit of Christmas is truly abroad in the land.

People are not thinking merely of themselves. There is too much need of Christmas cheer, too much of a need for food to sustain and apparel to cloth the body.

More people are in need than for many years, many of them people who have not heretofore had to seek aid.

But the spirit of brotherhood of mankind and Fatherhood of God which He came to teach is being made manifest more and more in the heart of men, women and children. The responsibility of each that they are their "brother's keeper" is being realized; and at Christmas time cheery greetings are exchanged, and food and clothing shared with those less fortunate.

The Girl Reserves of Bristol high school invited 125 boys and girls to share in a Christmas party in the high school gymnasium yesterday, and there they frolicked. Games, new and old, were enjoyed and the youngsters were royally served with ice cream, cake, candy and beverages. Santa Claus was present, and there was a tree. On the day previous trips had been made to the homes of these tots by the Reserves, and at least three toys left for each one. Their parents thus knew in time that Santa had remembered their little ones through these girls. The Reserves assisted the patron saint by donating toys and many were presented by their friends. Then too, used games and toys and dolls were made like new through efforts of the manual training and the domestic science departments.

At least 200 children are to be guests at a holiday party in the Bristol M. E. Church, this evening. For each of these the pupils in Miss Mary Smoyer's Sunday School class have gathered at least six toys or games. Each boy and girl will be presented with an apple, and orange and a candy cane.

Six families are being remembered by the young women in Mrs. David O. Taylor's Sunday School class of Bristol M. E. Church. To these folks baskets of food-stuffs will be delivered in time for Christmas celebrations.

To the shut-ins and the aged the young women of the class will present plants.

One hundred and thirteen children and 38 adults have had their holidays made exceedingly bright through generosity of contributors to the Italian Welfare Organization. Each of these 151 people have been clothed from head to foot anew—including shoes, hosiery, underwear, dresses and suits. In addition to the homes which these people represent have been sent coal, groceries, fruit, and poultry, in order that a real holiday might be assured.

The American Legion Auxiliary of Robert W. Bracken Post has cared for six children locally, providing wearing apparel and toys. A number of baskets have also been sent, these being filled with meat and groceries.

Bucks Lodge, 1169, L. O. O. M., has made a contribution to the Central Relief Committee. The Junior Travel Club has had delivered to a needy family one and one-half tons of coal, and distributed three baskets of food. Thirteen baskets of foodstuffs have been provided for those in need by members of the Catholic Daughters of America.

Many other organizations, including the Central Welfare Committee, the societies of the many churches in the vicinity, and clubs and lodges, are doing much to alleviate suffering at this time; by greetings and gifts giving cheer to hundreds of adults and children.

Same Old Insomnia!

IS THERE A SANTA CLAUS?

(Originally printed September 21, 1897, New York Sun)

We take pleasure in answering at once and thus prominently the communication below, expressing at the same time our great gratification that its faithful author is numbered among the friends of The Sun:

"Dear Editor:

"I am eight years old. Some of my little friends say there is no Santa Claus. Papa says 'If you see it in The Sun it's so.' Please tell me the truth, is there a Santa Claus?"

"VIRGINIA O'HANLON, 115 West Ninety-fifth street."

Virginia, your little friends are wrong. They have been effected by the skepticism of a skeptical age. They do not believe except they see. They think nothing can be which is not comprehensible by their little minds. All minds, Virginia, whether they be men's or children's, are little. In this great universe of ours, man is a mere insect, an ant, in his intellect, as compared with the boundless world about him, as measured by the intelligence capable of grasping the whole of truth and knowledge.

Yes, Virginia, there is a Santa Claus. He exists as certainly as love and generosity and devotion exist, and you know that they abound and give to your life its highest beauty and joy. Alas! how dreary would be the world if there were no Santa Claus! It would be as dreary as if there were no Virginias. There would be no childlike faith then, no poetry, no romance to make tolerable this existence. We should have no enjoyment, except in sense and sight. The eternal light with which childhood fills the world would be extinguished.

Not believe in Santa Claus! You might as well not believe in fairies! You might get your papa to hire men to watch in all the chimneys on Christmas Eve to catch Santa Claus, but even if they did not see Santa Claus coming down, what would that prove? Nobody sees Santa Claus, but that is no sign that there is no Santa Claus. The most real things in the world are those that neither children nor men can see. Did you ever see fairies dancing on the lawn? Of course not, but that's no proof that they are not there. Nobody can conceive or imagine all the wonders there are unseen and unseeable in the world.

You tear apart the baby's rattle and see what makes the noise inside, but there is a veil covering the unseen world which not even the strongest man, not even the united strength of all the strongest men that ever lived, could tear apart. Only faith, fancy, poetry, love, romance, can push aside that curtain and view and picture the supernatural beauty and glory beyond. Is it all real? Ah, Virginia, in all this world there is nothing else real and abiding.

No Santa Claus! Thank God! he lives, and he lives forever. A thousand years from now, Virginia, nay, ten times ten thousand years from now, he will continue to make glad the heart of childhood.

CHRISTMAS IN COLONIAL VIRGINIA GAY, FESTIVE

Fun Commenced Week in Advance, and Continued for Week After

WASHINGTON'S DIARY

Christmas in Colonial Virginia was a gay and festive period. Fun began a week before Christmas and continued for a week afterward with a round of house parties, balls, dances, dinners, and hunting, which would have taxed the energy of any modern debutante. The young people went into the woods for holly and greens which, fashioned in wreaths and garlands, adorned the stately drawing-rooms of the manor houses of the Potomac. Fowls were fattened for the table. Forest, field and stream contributed their succulent share to tempt the appetite of host and guests.

The United States George Washington Bicentennial Commission informs us that for days the frosty winter air rang with the glad shouts of welcome as each newly arrived coach emptied its load of happy visitors. The clatter of hoofs on the hard highway announced the coming of nearby neighbors who would dismount, come in for a hot toddy and a chat with the members of the household before mounting and clattering away again, to repeat the jolly encounter at the next estate.

We have no records of how Christmas was spent at Mount Vernon but we know that it was not always festive. There were long years when the master was absent for this holiday, gone to the wars to endure the rigors and dangers of winter campaigns. Perhaps one of Washington's happiest Christmases was in the year 1783. On December 23 Congress assembled in the State House at Annapolis where Washington arrived four days before and was met by Mrs. Washington. Congress was to receive the General's resignation as Commander-in-Chief of the Continental Army.

He left Annapolis the day following the short ceremony which marked the close of the last act of the great drama of the Revolution, departing as a private citizen for Mount Vernon, where he arrived on Christmas Eve. He approached the home he loved over roads lined with cheering friends and retainers. The hospitable doors of his stately house were flung open wide. Bright fires burned on the hearths. The air was filled with the songs of joy because the master had come home. He had left Mount Vernon a year before merely a man, a strong man in whom the people had faith and confidence, a strong man but untried. He returned the victorious general, savior of the country.

The peace and comfort of Mount Vernon which he dearly loved, surrounded by his family, his friends and his faithful servants, must have seemed a paradise to him. Did he think of that other Christmas when with his little band he crossed the ice-filled Delaware in the dead of night, or that terrible Christmas at Valley Forge? From his writings we will never know, for his diaries were neglected at that time, and, besides, he never gave details of any day's happenings, and made no descriptive or superfluous comments on anything that went on. In the letters of a young girl present at Mount Vernon on that Christmas in 1783, we find the following comments: "The servants were in great glee. They came from all quarters to get a glimpse of their idol. The General much affected, received them from the front veranda. Some, the old ones, were in tears, others were in rapturous mirth."

There are not many December 25 entries in the Washington diaries. The first is December 25, 1751, and was written on his voyage returning from the Barbadoes: "Christmas Day fine and clear and pleasant with moderate sea, the continuance of the trade (winds) which by observation had set us in the latitude 18 degrees, 30 minutes. We dined on . . . Irish goose which had been . . . for the purpose some weeks beef etc. etc. and drank a toast to our absent friends."

December 25, 1768. "At home all day."

December 25, 1769. "Dined and spent the afternoon at Colonel Lewis'." The occasion at Colonel Lewis' may have been an event, and probably was, but we must rely on our imaginations to fill in the details.

December 25, 1772. "Went to Pollock Church and returned to dinner. Found Mr. Tilghman here."

MAN, OUT OF WORK, INHALES GAS IN THE KITCHEN OF HOME

Casper Miller, 48, of 2316 Wilson Avenue, Found Dead on Floor

WAS HOME ALL ALONE

Wife Had Gone to Visit Children in Passaic, N. J.

Worry over lack of employment is believed to have been responsible for the suicide of Casper Miller, 48, 2316 Wilson avenue. Miller was found dead on the floor of the kitchen of his home last night shortly before six o'clock.

The odor of escaping gas, was no avenue who also owns the house in which Miller lived. Horne notified the gas office of the Philadelphia Electric Company and employees were rushed to the place. Russell Crosby forced his way into the kitchen and at once detected gas flowing from the burners of a nearby stove. Miller was found lying on his back with his head in front of the open gas oven, the jets of which were wide open. His head was on a pillow taken from one of the beds on the second floor. He was fully clothed.

Deputy coroner W. Furman Young said Miller had probably been dead two or three days. He was last seen Saturday night and a Sunday edition of a Philadelphia newspaper was on a table in one of the rooms.

Miller, wife and two sons lived at the Wilson avenue address. He was employed as a tool maker at the Key-Plane aircraft plant here from May 6, 1930 to November 13, 1931. Fifteen cents were found in his pockets and a sum of money in a purse in another room.

All doors of the kitchen had been pugged with rags and paper.

Miller's wife is said by neighbors to have gone to visit her children in Passaic, N. J., about a week ago. The man worried over his lack of employment and had so expressed himself to friends, all of whom speak highly of him.

Christmas greeting cards addressed to Miller and his wife were found under the front door.

Chief Jones found letters from which he obtained the address of Miller's daughter. The police in Clifton, N. J., a suburb of Passaic, were communicated with and Miller's folks were notified. They arrived in Bristol last night.

Newtown Couple Celebrate Their 67th Anniversary

NEWTOWN, Dec. 24.—On Dec. 22, 1864, two young men just returned from active service in the Civil War, embarked on the sea of matrimony in a double ceremony in Philadelphia, performed by Rev. Mr. Hanna, a Presbyterian clergyman. They were William A. Gorton and Winfield S. Ellis, both Bucks countians. The former took for his wife, Miss Sarah Knox, and the latter, Miss Francena Gorton, sister of the other groom. Mr. Gorton had been seriously wounded at the Battle of Cold Harbor, and his life was for a time despaired of, and he carried the marks of his wounds to the grave. He was active for many years in the business life of Bristol. Mr. and Mrs. Gorton died some years ago. One of their children is Tax Collector Louis R. Gorton, of Bristol.

Mr. and Mrs. Ellis are still living, the former in his 90th year, the latter in her 89th. Both are remarkably active for their ages. Friends from near and far remembered them yesterday with greetings upon their completion of 67 years of married life. Mr. Ellis is a carpenter by trade, at which he was engaged for nearly 70 years, and many buildings throughout lower Bucks County are monuments to his workmanship. He is the last surviving resident member of T. H. Wynkoop Post, G. A. R., of Newtown, of which he was commander for many years. He is also one of the oldest members of Sileam Lodge of Odd Fellows. He is a son of the late George B. and Amy Atkinson Ellis. George B. Ellis and his two brothers, Edwin M. Ellis and William H., were historical steel engravers a century ago and later, their work illustrating the productions of such authors as Byron, Goldsmith, Scott, Hume, Smellie and Miller, as well as Godey's Ladies' Book and Graham's Magazine.

Mr. and Mrs. Ellis have two surviving children, Rev. Charles G. Ellis, a Presbyterian clergyman of Margaretsville, N. Y., and William J. Ellis, editor and publisher, of Langhorne. John A. Ellis, of Pineville, is a brother and Mrs. Elizabeth A. Janney, of Fallsington, is a sister of Mr. Ellis. Mrs. Ellis has one surviving sister, Miss Rebecca J. Gorton, of Newtown. Mrs. Ellis was for many years active in the work of St. Luke's Episcopal Church and Sunday School and the local W. C. T. U.

Mrs. Ida Thorne, of Radcliffe street, and Jefferson avenue, has gone to Atlantic City, N. J., to spend some time with her sister, Miss Bertha Daufeld.

CHRISTMAS

"Unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord."

If there be no miracle in Heaven or earth, still is this the most potent benediction ever dropped into the wistful heart of mankind. The centuries measure their course, life's seasons revolve and write their changing fortunes upon us in line of experience, war follows peace and peace, war; and the manger of humility remains the shrine of our only hope.

It may be true that this ever-hastening age has enveloped Christmas with the flavor of self-indulgence, that we exact too wolfishly all that is purely material profit, that we exhaust ourselves in a mad display of artificial generosity, that we translate a simple and beautiful story into an orgy of the marketplace; this may or may not be true, and each can answer for himself. But it is still true that, in a very instant of time, every man may find undestroyed, the shrine of recollection hidden in his heart.

That seed of humanity, placed within us as the gift of sacrifice at birth, dies hard—if at all. It is, after all, something real and filled with meaning; it belongs to the imperishable which, all matter of faith apart, must believe that right is better than wrong, kindness better than cruelty, sentiment better than cynicism. For there is something which is Eternal, something which re-creates, re-animates, resurrects, even though the understanding of it escapes us. We know that beneath the dead and frozen surface of the earth life breathes and waits its time. What, in the balance with this profound mystery, is the misanthropy of a withered intelligence?

It is, perhaps, a pity we ever grow up. Or do we? What is this miracle by which we recapture the fine imagination of belief other than the flowering anew of Childhood's simple faith? It is the radiance of innocence which covers the earth and turns men's eyes, in Alaska, in India, in the distant outposts and at the home hearths, to that group of shepherds plodding their way through the night to worship the birth of revelation. There is nothing engraved more indelibly on the heart of mankind than the infinite source of that Star which is hope, and of that angelic chorus pouring down from the bursting heavens with the sublime proclamation: "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men."

It needs something more than a smart sneer to rob the world of that majestic moment, be it allegory or circumstance; it needs something more profound than the piteous arrogance of intellectual self-deception to blot out from the consolation of humanity the grand symposium of its transcending reassurance. It is sufficient if man finds himself borne, on the wings of Christmas, from the ends of the world straight to the hearth of his better self; if the Star leads him, remembering, to the cradle of his good intentions.

"But Mary kept all these things and pondered them in her heart." And so may we.

The silver lining to all domestic clouds is pay day.

CHAPTER XIII

The man who approached her was very tall and broad shouldered. He was quite dark, with thick black hair and dark eyes and a small mustache. He walked as lightly as a cat, he wore slightly shabby, expensive clothes beautifully, and he was very good-looking and very bad-tempered. He walked directly to Fanchon, stopped beside her and stared down at her.

"I suppose you're Evelyn Howard," he said.

"Why, yes," Fanchon told him, still dazed from the sun and her halt sleep.

He remarked, abruptly.

"We may as well have it out before my mother comes. I don't know what she has told you. I would rather tell you myself anyway. I am perfectly well aware of your reasons for coming here. But dealing with a sentimental woman is one thing and dealing with me is another. I'd like you to understand once and for all that I am quite conscious of your game and that I will block it at every turn, if possible. If my mother hasn't sense enough to see you are here under entirely false pretenses . . . I have!"

The color drained from Fanchon's face. It isn't possible! she told herself wildly. For the last week or so, with returning strength, she had come to her feeling of peace and of safety. And day by day she had grown fonder of, and more grateful to, Jennie Carstairs. She realized now with a wrenching pang that the great price of discovery and the relinquishing of her masquerade would not be the danger threatening her from exposure, the danger from Tony himself, but the disillusionment and righteous anger which she must face from Jennie Carstairs.

This was Collin then. She stared at him. He pulled up a low rustic bench, sat down, pulled a fat gold cigarette case from his pocket, opened it and meticulously offered it to Fanchon. Mechanically she shook her head, fighting for composure, for words. And waiting for him to go on, to tell her how he knew . . . what he knew.

"Now," said Collin Carstairs, lighting a cigarette and expelling the first blue smoke, "now, we may as well have it out! I know, of course, that coming to New York under my mother's protection was infinitely better than indefinite school teaching. I don't blame you for jumping it the opportunity. I merely wanted to explain to you if my mother has not—and I don't suppose she has—why I am unalterably opposed to this arrangement . . . Cousin Evelyn," he added, satirically.

Fanchon's breath came easier. So, his quarrel was not with her, not with Fanchon Meredith, not with "Tony's broad," not with her masquerading and her deception, but with Evelyn! Well, as Evelyn, she could deal with him! In her relief, excitement and a sort of fighting spirit flooded her very veins. She sat up, erect, in the swing and regarded him. The wind ruffled her blue-black curls, the warm golden skin was flushed with rose, and the strange turquoise eyes were dark with anger and emotion.

"I marvel," Collin remarked, "that you were permitted to teach school so long."

"I marvel," Collin remarked, regarding her with frank, if unwilling admiration, "that you were permitted to teach school so long! Four years, is it not? And I know that Hawaiian moons are very lovely and young men very susceptible. I've been in Hawaii," he said.

"Are you trying to pay me compliments?" Fanchon demanded.

It was her first word to him. He flicked the ashes from his cigarette and smiled. Her voice was as lovely as she, he admitted ungrudgingly. And there was a flash of steel through all the loveliness and softness of voice and person. Here was he, admitted to himself further, no smirking, silly, gushing little creature, as he had allowed himself to imagine she would be from her letters to his mother and his general mental impression of her, but a very beautiful and probably intelligent girl. An enemy worthy of his mettle.

"I'm not complimentary," he replied, and smiled. "I'm merely truthful. You are far better to look upon than I dreamed. Very easy on the eyes. But that doesn't alter the case."

"I take it," Fanchon said, demurely, "that you are not beside yourself with rapture at my appearance here. Why? What have I done to you? Are you afraid," she mocked him, knowing better, "that I will rob you of any of your rightful inheritance?"

His face darkened. He was really, she thought, an astonishingly handsome man. She hated him and despised him but his good looks could not be denied. They looked at one another with hostility, she with hot resentment, he with cool rancor. The very air of the rose garden, fragrant, soft, sea-wood, sun-steeped, seemed suddenly electric with this curious and out of proportion antagonism between two young people.

Merry Christmas

To all our friends and patrons we wish a Merry, Merry Christmas!

May there be plenty to eat, warm hearts and warm homes, laughter of happy children, and the peace that comes with the season.

As you contemplate the toys with which the youngsters play, the little gifts of one kind and another that are strewn about the house, perhaps you will take satisfaction in knowing that by economizing in your transportation expenditures, by using our buses and trolleys, you were able to make the holiday just a little merrier than it might otherwise have been.

And though it be Christmas, the buses and trolleys will be running as usual, to take you and your loved ones to visit wherever you will, and to bring you back, safely, comfortably, and inexpensively.

Contesting Teams Ready For Charity Game

harring accidents, very few substitutions are looked for.

Then too, the championship of the town, which the contest will decide, is an honor which is greatly coveted by each team, and the determination to win this honor will act as an incentive to spur the players, to give their best to win.

Each team has a large following and these rooters will be present to the last man, at the game tomorrow. The coaches and members of the two teams are not saying much, but underneath this quietness there is a determination to win, and unless all signs fail, the game tomorrow will be one of the most hotly contested ever witnessed here.

The willingness of the members of the two teams to give their service entirely free for the benefit of local charity, is most commendable and shall win for them, the support of the townspeople in their future endeavors.

Arrangements have been made for adequate police assistance to handle the big crowd, and positively no one will be admitted to the grounds without a ticket. The local police force will be assisted by the State Police and members of the American Legion and the Bristol Exchange Club.

The American Legion Cadet Bugle Corps will be present to enliven the occasion and will parade between the halves. "Dave" Landreth will be in charge of the grounds and all arrangements. The school board will allow the teams to use the dressing rooms in the gymnasium, but all others must keep out of the building.

The line-up of the teams is as follows:

NEW SPORTS CHAMPIONS OF 1931.

As 1931 sinks towards the limbo of other back numbers in the calendar, it is interesting to review how it figures in the history of sports and what champions it brought forth to add to the list of former years. On the tennis courts, Helen Wills Moody, who allowed her title to go undefended in 1930, came back in '31 and regained her crown in a blaze of glory. The real tennis sensation of the year, however, was 19-year-old Ellsworth Vines, of Pasadena, Cal., who battered his way through a phalanx of veterans to win the men's title. On the links, the Women's National Championship was captured by 20-year-old Helen Hicks, and Francis Ouimet, battle-scarred veteran, made a glorious comeback to recapture the men's national amateur title that he first won back in 1914. In the water, Clarence Crabbe, of the Los Angeles Athletic Club, took the National Swim Championship, smashing the half-mile free-style mark with a record of 10 minutes and 20.4 seconds. The Queen Mermaid for 1931 is Helene Madison, of the Washington A. C. of Seattle, who makes a hobby of setting new marks. Frank Wykoff, if California, is undisputed sprint king of the world, his record of .09 2-5 for the 100-yard dash marking him as the fastest runner in the history of the world. Football's outstanding hero of the year is generally conceded to be Marchmont Schwartz, of Notre Dame, and baseball produces as its shining light "Lefty" Grove, of the Philadelphia Athletics. The undisputed champion of four-legged athletes is Twenty Grand, who won eight of his ten races during the season, among them the Kentucky Derby, bringing in $218,545 in prize money. The boxing ring magnum cum laude goes to Tony Canzoneri, lightweight champion, who improves with every battle in defense of his title. The Navy crew gets the honors in the rowing world by virtue of its brilliant victory in the intercollegiate championship at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., and the Hotzy-Totsy gets the laurels for power boats by its conquest in the Gold Cup Regatta at Montauk Point. Taken by and large, 1931 has not done so badly for sport. The performances of our athletes inspire confidence that Uncle Sam will retain the Olympic title at Los Angeles next Summer.

X'MAS PARTY FOR ROTARIANS

The Bristol Rotary Club today held a Christmas party at Jones' Neshaminy House at 12.15 o'clock. The Rev. Henry Stuart Paynter was the speaker.

HOLIDAY DECORATIONS

Christmas decorations last night were brilliantly lighted on the Municipal Building, Harriman Hospital, and in numerous private homes here. The streets of Bristol this year present more holiday decorations than ever before for the Christmas season. The front of the Elks' Home has also been attractively festooned with lights and laurel.

CHILDREN ENTERTAINED

EDGELEY, Dec. 24.—All children of school age and under in the community were entertained at a Christmas party by the Edgely Parent-Teacher Association in the Union Church last evening. Each child received a stocking filled with candy, and an orange. Santa Claus was present, and the program enjoyed by young and old.

TWO HURT

When an automobile turned over on Newport Road this morning at 1.30, two people were injured. Occupants of the machine included: Mr. and Mrs. Edward Parker, 2006 E. Venango street, Philadelphia; and Miss Doris Wilson, 1715 Diamond street, Philadelphia. Mr. Parker sustained small abrasions; and Miss Wilson lacerations of the right wrist and left arm. They were treated at the Harriman Hospital.

CHURCH SERVICE

There will be divine worship on Christmas morning at Presbyterian Church of Our Saviour, Wood street, and Lincoln avenue. Program will include singing of Christmas hymns, both in Italian and English, special music by the deaconess, and junior choir. The service will be concluded with celebration of sacrament of the Lord's Supper. Service will begin at 10.45 sharp. Rev. Andrew G. Solla is minister.

HULMEVILLE

Miss Margaret M. Dayhoff, of Trenton, N. J., spent Tuesday and Wednesday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. S. Dayhoff, Main street. Tomorrow, Mr. and Mrs. Dayhoff, Misses Margaret and Dorothy Dayhoff will be holiday dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Morris Dayhoff, of Bristol Township.

Rev. and Mrs. Francis E. Walz were hosts at their home last evening to 25 young people of Neshaminy M. E. Church, at a Christmas party. The group spent a most pleasant evening in enjoyment of games and contests, prizes being presented those showing prowess. Christmas carols were also sung. The decorations were in keeping with the season, greens, red and green crepe paper streamers, and an improvised fire-place adding to the festive appearance. Dainty refreshments were served.

Big Holiday Bill Offered at Theatre

Two more extraordinary attractions has been booked for the Grand Theatre for the Yuletide. For Christmas matinee and night Manager Lynn has for that joyous day none other than the Marseland Radio Star Revue, composed of radio stars that you hear every day on the air. This galaxy of stars are headed by Little Danny Ferraro, who is so familiar with all radio listeners. There are 12 stars in person on the stage. Fredrick & Collins, Roxy Leffese Trio, the Step Sisters, Geo. Henfer, Maria Schaffer—all under the personal direction of Miss Irene Ritter and as the screen attraction, Lynn Fontane and Alfred Lunt, in "The Guardsman," a picture that has swept the country. Saturday matinee and night another great show, headed by the two most sensational acts in vaudeville, Doet & LeMars and Selma Bratus and Co., also Nicholas Bros., a pair of young colored dancers that know how to dance, and Bob Girard, a comedian of merit. On the screen for Saturday is the great laugh provoking comedian, Bert Lahr, and funny Charlotte Greenwood, that big, funny comedienne, in a side-splitting comedy, Flying High.

December 24, 1774. "At home all day. Mr. Richard Washington came to dinner as did Mrs. Newman." The dinner guests evidently remained the night, as frequently happened, and there were possibly other guests to make merry at Mount Vernon.

December 25, 1774. "At home all day with the above." From July 1775 to April 30, 1781, no diary was kept. The events of the intervening Christmases we must glean from other pages in history.

The notes made on preparations for Christmas were meager.

December 20, 1785. "Brought some Carts and Cutters from my Plantations to assist in laying in a Stock of Firewood for Christmas."

On December 21, 1785 he went hunting with the men who were his house guests, namely: Mr. Daniel Dulany, Mr. Benjamin Dulany, Messrs. Samuel and Thomas Handson, Philip Alexander, Mr. Mounsher, also Ferdinand Washington and Mr. Shaw.

On the 23rd: "Same are here hunting."

On the 24th there was no entry.

On the 25th: "Count Castiglioni, Co. Ball and Mr. Willm. Hunter came here to dinner, the last of whom returned to Alexandria afterwards."

The diary tells that Colonel Ball departed on the 28th and Count Castiglioni on the 29th on a tour of the south. Count Castiglioni was from Italy making a tour of this country.

December 25, 1786. "At home all day. Miss Allan, Betsey, Patsy and Nelly Custis came here for dinner." The diary for several days following shows there were a number of other guests in the house.

On the 29th the diary remarks that "the holidays are over and people all at work." So he rode around the place to look over the plantations.

December 25, 1788. "Sent Mr. Madison after breakfast as far as Colchester in my carriage." The entries of several days before show that he had sent the carriage to Dumfries for Mrs. Washington of Bushfield and others, but the carriage was obliged to turn back at Occoquan on account of ice on the river and to go back to Dumfries.

There are a few notations of Washington's Christmases spent away from Mount Vernon. On December 25, 1789, when he was in New York, his diary reveals: "Christmas Day. Went to St.

Will You Help Those who are Willing to Work?

A number of men, women and girls of various vocations, who are willing to work but cannot find employment, have registered with the Bristol Unemployment Bureau.

Many of these have dependents and are the heads of families who find themselves in stringent circumstances during this time of depression.

A list of all such persons is available to those desiring the services of such a person or persons, regardless of the length of time for which such employment might be offered.

You are asked to make some sacrifice. Do your share by providing work for one or several days at your home or place of business.

If those who are able will give employment to these folks and thus aid them to earn that which they need, they will be accomplishing a two-fold purpose.
